

Helen McIlveen
*Assistant
Vice President*

Education: BA Hons, Historical Studies, University of Newcastle, UK

Passion for philanthropy: During her five-year tenure at CCS, Helen has demonstrated a passion and commitment to the non-profit field. She has worked across a broad spectrum of organisations including primary, secondary and higher education, global health and humanitarian initiatives. Her passion lies in supporting organisations with the foundations to succeed to enable them to continue their valuable work long term.

Experience: Helen has extensive experience with a variety of development initiatives, including prospect research, running a development office, planning and feasibility studies, and capital campaign design and implementation. She brings a wide range of cross-sector experience to her work at CCS.

More recently, Helen has worked with The Royal College of Surgeons in Ireland (RCSI); a distinguished health sciences University based in Dublin. Helen has supported the establishment of RCSI's Development Office, the launch of their most ambitious campaign to date and has supported RCSI to secure the largest gifts in their history.

Helen has also worked with several secondary schools including Holy Child School, Killiney, Gonzaga College, Dublin and Haberdashers' Aske's Boys School, London. In addition, Helen has worked on international humanitarian campaigns including the AMAR Foundation to unlock progress for their initiatives supporting children in Romania.

Prior to working for CCS Helen was a Senior Project Manager for The John Lewis Partnership and brings these management and leadership skills to bear in her work at CCS.
