

Jennifer Scott Caragiulo

Senior Director of Development and Campaign Director
American Museum of Natural History

Jennifer Scott Caragiulo is a development strategist with nearly two decades of fundraising experience spanning both the political and nonprofit sectors. She currently serves as the Senior Director of Development and Campaign Director at the American Museum of Natural History in New York City, where she manages the largest fundraising campaign in the Museum's 150-year history and oversees the Donor Relations program—a department she created—and the Museum's Prospect Research program.

Prior to joining the Museum, Jennifer was a Vice President at CCS Fundraising where she provided campaign management and strategic planning expertise to clients in the New York and Washington, DC areas. Jennifer began her career in the political campaign arena raising funds for candidates and committees in New York State, New York City, and Long Island. She is a graduate of Fordham University.